Learning Environments WA (LEWA) is providing opportunities to contribute to, engage with, and build on research into learning environments in a West Australian context over the next two years. This research will bring together people and ideas through a number of events and activities – a collaborative Workshop; individual and collaborative postgraduate Research Projects; and a Symposium – to establish our burgeoning community of Postgraduate Researchers, Educators and Practitioners (PREP) at LEWA.

happening?

It all starts with an online collaborative Workshop in which people come together to capture the depth and breadth of the current knowledge about places for learning - to discuss what we already know and explore what we would like to know more about. Your experiences in practices and projects will be explored, to identify the different ways in which LEWA can contribute to, and participate in, research of learning environments. This workshop will identify key research themes and define up to five postgraduate research projects to be undertaken by LEWA members and other interested colleagues.
