Nobody would wish their dentist was like they were in the 1970s. Nobody would go. So why would we like our schools to be like the 1970s? [Stephen Heppell]

'New School' is an education-architecture documentary [34:40]. This film features a cast of international experts, including Professor Stephen Heppell, Dr Julia Atkin, Greg Whitby and two James MacDonnell Award Winning architectural firms - Hayball and Y2 Architecture.

New School is a project borne of a need for change. It is also a document to highlight the work of schools meeting the challenges of the contemporary world. It provides tangible examples of how schools and systems can devise innovative solutions and improve the schooling experience for students.

Providing excellent education is a challenge we face across the world as we prepare our students for the 'big, hairy, audacious' problems of the future. This film asks educators, designers, parents and systems to consider how we respond to the complexities of our world.

In this spirit, we wish to share New School with as many viewers as possible.
